Celebrate Differences

The experiences across the Autism spectrum are varied and unique. From Autistic individuals requiring 24/7 supported care, to Autistic adults living fully independent lives, no single experience is the same as another. The Autism Society of America makes room for the infinite ways in which people experience life and we Celebrate Differences.

The Autism Society believes that no one should be put into diagnostic boxes, categorized, or labeled. We are committed to creating a space where individuals can identify themselves as they choose. That is why we Celebrate Differences. No matter how you identify in the Autism community; you are a part of the connection. No matter who you are, the person you are is infinite, and you are the only you there is. No family or individual’s story is the same as any other, and the Autism Society believes the world should recognize the infinite ways the Autism community experiences life.
Who We Are

The Autism Society is the oldest and largest grassroots Autism organization and a leader in Autism advocacy, education, support and community programming. Through our nationwide network of 70+ affiliates, the Autism Society supports approximately half a million Autistic individuals each year. By focusing on initiatives related to employment, safety, health equity, education, public policy, and more, we are connecting people to the resources they need, when they need them.

About Us

Our Mission

We create connections, empowering everyone in the Autism community with the resources needed to live fully.

Our Vision

Creating a world where everyone in the Autism community is connected to the support they need, when they need it.

Our Core Values

Dignity - Where the value and self-determination of every individual is upheld.

Equity - Where everyone with Autism achieves the highest possible quality of life.

Inclusion - Where every person is integrated into society without barriers or exceptions in a collaborative environment.

Diversity - Where everyone is respected for their unique and individual differences.

Integrity - Where we conduct ourselves with honor, truth, and respect in our thoughts, words and actions.
A Letter from our Leaders

The experiences across the Autism spectrum are varied and unique. From Autistic individuals who require 24/7 support to those who live fully independent lives, each person experiences Autism differently.

Since 1965, the Autism Society of America has made room for the infinite ways in which people experience life with Autism. We have made it a priority to Celebrate Differences — because what makes us unique is what allows us to see the world from a different perspective.

We are an organization that creates spaces where Autistic individuals can identify themselves as they choose. We also strive to be an organization that people can trust, and we’ve worked to build and sustain this trust for nearly six decades.

In 2023 our work — and your trust in us — helped change the lives of half a million people.

Together, we offered support to people who need help now. Whether it was a family overwhelmed by a new diagnosis, or an Autistic individual worried about their first job interview, the Autism Society provided support and guidance that matched each person’s unique needs.

Together, we changed the lives of those who want to make a difference. We continued to be a trusted resource not only for Autistic individuals and their families, but also for caring friends, allies, educators, healthcare professionals, representatives in government, and other champions who want to help.

In April 2023, we launched our fifth annual #CelebrateDifferences campaign in honor of Autism Acceptance Month. Throughout the month, the Autism Society, our affiliates, and our community partners worked together to spread awareness and promote acceptance. Later in the year, our new Autism Justice Center — focused on empowerment, advocacy, and justice — began its preliminary work as a unique resource for Autistic individuals, their families, and advocates navigating the criminal justice and legal systems.

Each of these life-changing initiatives and programs was supported by Autism Society donors like you in 2023. Thank you for trusting us with your investment in this work and thank you for your continued generosity.

Your contributions help us Celebrate Differences, change lives, and connect the Autism community to education, resources, advocacy, and above all, to one another.

With appreciation,

Did you know?

- There are approximately 5.4 million Autistic adults in the US.
- 1 in 36 children are diagnosed with Autism, the fastest-growing developmental disorder in the United States.
- Autism Spectrum Disorder (ASD) occurs in all racial, ethnic, and socioeconomic groups, but is 4x more common in males than females.
- Of the children who received an Autism diagnosis, and despite the majority of concerns being documented before 3 years old, the average age of diagnosis was a little under 4 and a half years old.

Each April, we celebrate Autism Acceptance Month, a time to come together and #CelebrateDifferences, spread awareness of the importance of early diagnosis, advocate for inclusion in the greater community, and promote acceptance across all aspects of life.

In April 2023, we unveiled our newest brand photos featuring Autistic individuals with higher support needs, their family members and support team members. Our goal was to capture a varied and diverse range of experiences within the Autism community, because acceptance is welcoming unique representation in all aspects of life.

Our photoshoot focused on:
- Diversity in age, race, ethnicity, gender identity, and level of support
- Gathering authentic stories and experiences from Autistic individuals with higher support needs

For our participants:
- About half use AAC devices
- 90% with intellectual/cognitive disability
- 70% requiring full-time care

The Autism Society’s brand is designed with the Autism community. Autistic self-advocates identified their lack of inclusion in decision-making within Autism organizations as a major hurdle for their engagement with those organizations. From the beginning of the brand process, the Autism Society set out to create a space that was fully inclusive, accepting, and representative of all those in the Autism community, including Autistic individuals, their families, friends, caregivers, and professionals.

April Highlights

- 103k+ people visited our website for additional information.
- The White House Easter Egg Roll provided the first sensory-friendly hour for families and children with disabilities to enjoy festivities without sensory overload.
- Approximately 400 people participated in the virtual conference at the annual Disability Policy Seminar, which was co-hosted by the Autism Society.
- Chrysler and Autism Society of America announced our partnership at the New York Auto Show.
- The Autism Society created educational content with Goodnites, Nickelodeon, and Pura Vida, shared digitally, through broadcast, and retail experiences respectively.

I want to get a job and I want to grow up and live life for myself.
– Jaire

I want people to know that it’s a beautiful experience, it’s extremely hard and you will need help. It’s life-changing having someone in your life with Autism.
– Kaleo’s family

I struggle a lot with controlling my body, especially if I’m a little bit nervous or even excited. The photoshoot was a great example. You were all so welcoming and kind. I could feel your acceptance and understanding in your eyes and your smiles. Thank you.

Public Policy

• Autism Justice Center
Key Achievements in Public Policy

Everyone has the right to live fully and to understand laws that affect them. The Autism Society’s Public Policy Committee and Board of Directors work together to advocate for legislation that improves quality of life.

In 2023, we continued our public policy work to ensure full representation and champion the rights and well-being of individuals with Autism and their families.

Appropriations for Autism and Disability Programs

In 2023, the Autism Society successfully leveraged its extensive grassroots network to advocate for critical funding for Autism and disability-related programs for Fiscal Year 2024. Despite facing a challenging legislative environment marked by stringent budget negotiations and political contention over the debt ceiling, our concerted efforts resulted in the protection and, in some cases, enhancement of funding levels for these vital programs. Our network’s dedication was particularly evident as they rallied to send over 1,000 persuasive letters to Congress members, effectively safeguarding the financial support essential for sustaining and expanding our initiatives.

Federal Regulations

This year, the Autism Society played a pivotal role in shaping federal policy affecting the Autism community by engaging with the Administration on a range of proposed regulatory changes. Our efforts were instrumental in advancing proposals aimed at fostering equitable access to healthcare and enhancing home-and-community-based services (HCBS). Additionally, we emphasized the importance of person-centered decision-making within HCBS frameworks. To facilitate community involvement, our policy team developed and disseminated a template that empowered over 50 stakeholders to submit informed comments on proposed rules designed to eliminate discrimination based on disability in healthcare services. This proactive approach not only influenced policy formulation but also ensured that the voices of those we serve were heard at the highest levels of government decision-making.

Enhanced State Advocacy Efforts

Throughout the year, our policy team collaborated closely with affiliates nationwide to champion crucial state legislative changes for the Autism community. This collaboration yielded significant legislative victories across several states, including the passage of laws to establish eligibility for wandering alerts for individuals with Autism, abolish subminimum wages, enhance police training on Autism, and boost reimbursement rates for direct support workers. Additionally, the Autism Society played a critical role in educating lawmakers about the detrimental impacts of certain proposed measures, notably the introduction of voucher systems in Texas schools.

Moreover, in response to the ongoing challenges posed by the changes in Medicaid unwinding following the pandemic, our team worked diligently with affiliates to safeguard healthcare coverage for the Autism community and maintain vital flexibilities in the waiver system. These efforts ensured the continuation of options for teleservices and compensation for family caregivers, crucial adaptations that support the diverse needs of our community.

Our Advocacy Impact

- 22k+ people attended over 130 advocacy events
- 2,702 letters sent to congress/senators through Autism Society’s Action Center
- 400 attendees to Disability Policy Seminar
- 40 federal bills supported
- 30 state bills supported; 4 state bills passed

The Autism Justice Center

In 2023, the Autism Society of America launched the Autism Justice Center, focusing on empowerment, advocacy, and justice. Through the Autism Justice Center, we champion the rights and well-being of individuals with Autism and their families.

Committed to inclusion, the Autism Justice Center represents all voices across the Autism community, including Black, Indigenous and People of Color (BIPOC), individuals of all gender and sexual identities, and immigrants. The Autism Justice Center stands as a beacon of hope and support for Autistic individuals, their families, and advocates — employing various strategies that include direct advocacy, education, and litigation support.

In addition to social justice issues, there is an urgent need for a paradigm shift in how our society responds to Autism, mental health, and behavioral health crises. The current system that relies on law enforcement intervention has proven to be inadequate, unjust, and sometimes fatal. As part of our work, we are advocating for a compassionate, informed, appropriate response to mental and behavioral health crises to expand equity and avoid preventable tragedies.

The Autism Justice Center’s multi-faceted strategy includes developing resources for legal professionals to better represent Autistic clients, working with our Public Policy team on legislative initiatives, and expanding the training of first responders and other safety initiatives.

Did you know?

- By age 21, approximately 20% of youth with Autism had been stopped and questioned by police, and nearly 55% had been arrested.
- 30-50% of people killed by law enforcement are people with Autism or other disabilities.

The Autism Justice Center has been extremely helpful to myself and my Autistic, incarcerated son. Their care, concern and dedication to our issue has gone above and beyond anything I could have ever expected. Thank you so much for everything you have done and for everything you will do to fight for justice for individuals on the spectrum.

One young man’s story of unjust prosecution and abuse.

In 2010, Reginald “Neli” Latson was living with his mom and sister in Stafford County, Virginia. One morning, as he waited for his local library to open, someone called the sheriff’s department and reported him as a suspicious Black male, “possibly in possession of a gun.”

Latson, who is on the Autism spectrum, didn’t have a gun. Later, he and his family would learn the caller hadn’t seen a gun, but that detail came too late. A deputy grabbed the teenager, and he reacted by trying to get away — as would many with Autism who are sensitive to touch. Neli was arrested and charged with assault.

In the ensuing months, prosecutors refused to consider Neli’s disabilities. They claimed he was using his Autism as a “diagnosis of convenience.” At trial, the prosecutors rejected an offer of disability services as an alternative to incarceration, and Neli was convicted and sentenced to 10 years in prison.

During his imprisonment, Neli was subjected to long periods of solitary confinement. At one point he was tasered and strapped into a restraint chair for more than nine hours, for behaviors related to his disabilities.

Neli’s mother fought for her son’s release — first on her own, and then with help from organizations in the Autism community, including the Autism Society and local affiliates. In 2015, Virginia Governor Terry McAuliffe granted a conditional pardon. This allowed Neli to leave prison and live in a group home. In 2021, Governor Ralph Northam ended state supervision, granting Neli autonomy to choose where and how he lives.

Today, Neli has his own apartment and receives community-based supports. He is still fighting for an unconditional pardon to have the felony convictions wiped from his record. And though he is finally “free,” it took 11 years, two governors, and a national conversation about race and disability to get justice. In his own words at a recent White House event, we still have “a long way to go.”

Neli’s story is just one example of why the Autism Center for Empowerment, Advocacy and Justice is so important for our community.

The trauma that I suffered due to racism and the criminal justice system’s punishment of Autistic-related behaviors still bothers me, but I am happy that the activism and publicity about my case not only helped me, but also helped to make change for others. I look forward to serving as an advocate for the Autism Center for Empowerment, Advocacy and Justice.

– Neli Latson
Our national programs have a significant impact on individuals with Autism and are designed to be replicable across our affiliate network. Priority initiatives include our Safety on the Spectrum™ programs, dedicated to first responder training and water and wandering safety, our Employment Initiative aimed at enhancing job opportunities, our Health Equity programming focused on accessible healthcare, and our National Helpline, focusing on addressing the needs of the community.
Safety on the Spectrum™

First Responder Program

The Autism Society’s Safety on the Spectrum™: First Responder Program was developed to promote safe interactions between first responders and people with Autism, their support systems, and community.

One in 5 young adults with Autism will interact with a police officer before age 21, and are:

- 12x more likely to become involved in the justice system without criminal intent
- 7x more likely to be victims of crime and 5x more likely to be incarcerated

Leveraging a “train the trainer” approach, the Autism Society will impact positive change on a national scale through local delivery of its gold-standard training and certification program. This program is designed to equip first responders with the training and resources they need to serve the Autism community safely and effectively. Training is designed to improve understanding of Autism and the benefits of Autism-informed strategies for communication, crisis prevention and de-escalation, and tools and technologies that can support safe interactions. Additional program activities include community education, outreach, and resource dissemination to promote self-advocacy and community safeguarding.

Long-term goals of the program include:

- increasing training, resources, and collaboration to improve interactions between first responders and the Autism community
- reducing the use of force and restraint to foster safe and effective interactions between law enforcement and Autistic individuals

Unlike any other program of its kind, the First Responders Program has been developed collaboratively through a Safety Task Force comprised of first responders, Autistic advocates, parents, social workers, and local community leaders. In 2023, 4,676 first responders were trained within the Autism Society network. This national program will expand this reach through a pilot program in 2024.

As a parent of a non-speaking adult, a police encounter is one of my greatest fears. Despite my appreciation of the service our officers provide to keep our community safe, I know all too well that even the police with the biggest hearts don’t have the experience or resources to support my son in crisis.

Kevin & Avonte Grant

The Autism Society is leading a national effort to prevent water and wandering-related deaths through proactive programming, public awareness, and public policy. With funding from the Bureau of Justice Assistance through Kevin & Avonte’s law, the Autism Society is collaborating with the International Association of Chiefs of Police (IACP) and The Arc’s National Center on Criminal Justice and Disability® (NCCJD®) to provide training and technical assistance to organizations and agencies within law enforcement, public safety, and the disability community. Together, we are working to identify and develop best practice guidance to support first responders, policymakers, and community leaders that improve public safety and reduce injury and death due to wandering and drowning among individuals with Autism, developmental disabilities, and Alzheimer’s or dementia.

Safety on the Spectrum™

Water & Wandering Program

The Autism Society’s Safety on the Spectrum™: Water and Wandering Program addresses the critical issues of preventable injury and death due to water and wandering related incidents within the Autism community. The initiative has a dual focus on increasing prevention and response. Proactive programming includes education and awareness promoting safeguarding and skill-building through our accessible learn-to-swim model. Response efforts include emergency preparedness and education & awareness efforts promoting technological enhancements and efforts to enhance search & rescue in collaboration with our Safety Task Force and First Responder Program.

The Autism Society seeks to develop an accessible aquatics training and certification program that supports instructors and the Autism community nationwide.

The initiative focuses on:
- Proactive programming
- Prevention
- Improved responses to wandering incidents

In addition, the Water and Wandering Program supports individuals and families through education and tangible resources such as:
  - Safety checklists
  - Social narratives
  - Tip sheets
  - Emergency planning tools

Did you know?
- People with Autism are 160x more likely to drown than their neurotypical peers.
- 91% of deaths in children 14 years or younger with Autism are due to drowning.
- Of those who eloped, 53% went missing long enough to cause concern.
- 50% of parents report receiving no guidance on preventing or addressing elopement, and the majority identify elopement as one of the most stressful behaviors they have to cope with.
- 49% of children with Autism attempted to elope at least once after age 4.
- Almost half of Autistic children aged 4 to 7 have eloped.

Program Outcomes:
- Increased number of aquatics staff trained to support swim students with Autism
- Increased participation and completion in learn-to-swim programs among Autistic individuals
- Increased community collaboration between aquatics organizations, schools, families, and the Autism community
- Decreased preventable drowning deaths and non-fatal submersion injuries within Autism community

“Testimonial

It was an early September weekend afternoon when the school group chat started going off repeatedly. A coworker received a Ring camera notification showing a familiar face as missing and alerted the staff. The student was new to the school, but everyone felt the gut-wrenching tug when seeing his face in the post. It was mere minutes before a group of us started to search for him, using what we knew of the 5-year-old in hopes of recovering him safely. My team and I had only worked with him twice before this devastating day, but his affinity and love for the water was abundantly clear. It was not until later that night that law enforcement found the boy deceased in the canal just steps from his front door.

The little boy had a personality grander than any five-year-old I had ever met. He made sure you knew he was in the room with his vivacious energy, zest for life, and infectious smirk. The second I heard that he had gone missing my heart sunk and I desperately tried to ignore the gut-wrenching feeling, knowing he was likely heading straight for the water. In my short time working with him in our school’s learn to swim program, it was clear that he loved the water and found tranquility in it. He loved going underwater often to the bottom of the pool, not realizing he could not swim.

Unfortunately, a repair man had come to his house, leaving a door ajar, and the child managed to quietly and quickly wander from his home. The family knew within minutes that he had left by checking their Ring camera footage, but they couldn’t find him. They alerted law enforcement and the search ensued.

Unfortunately, despite best efforts the little boy was found deceased in the canal, steps from his home. This experience, although not ‘my’ child, broke me in so many ways. The disparity in resources and services for individuals with Autism became glaringly obvious. I had created and implemented a school-based learn to swim program, but I knew I could do more to help the community that means so much to me. I keep his picture on my desk and am reminded daily of my why - this is for him, and everyone like him. I landed here with the Autism Society living our mission and vision in the hopes of creating, implementing, and finetuning a learn to swim curriculum and wandering initiative so that individuals with Autism can live fully and safely.

Did you know?

• More than 66% of Autistic young adults are unemployed and are typically not engaged in higher education after high school
• 58% of workplace accommodations cost absolutely nothing, while the remaining typically cost approximately $500.
• The unemployment rate for people with disabilities is typically twice that of the general working population.

Employment Initiative

The Autism Society’s Employment initiative addresses the significant employment disparities facing individuals on the Autism spectrum. Employment plays a pivotal role in transitions to adulthood, independent living, socialization, self-worth and confidence. With alarmingly high rates of unemployment and underemployment among Autistic adults, our program strives to rethink systems and reshape employment policies and practices to ensure equitable opportunities for all members of the Autism community.

Leading with a “Fulfillment Mindset,” the Employment Initiative creates connections – between Autistic individuals, caregivers and supporters, and employers to advance access to resources, training, and opportunities for meaningful work experiences, acceptance, and belonging. We advocate for equitable systems and offer employer training, tailored resources, and direct support to build effective and inclusive policies and practices that help Autistic employees thrive. Our comprehensive resource guides are designed to help individuals with Autism prepare for and navigate each stage of the employment process. Through our research and discovery phase, we have supported more than 2,000 community members and 65 engaged employers through employment workshops across our network.

Every person with Autism deserves access to meaningful and inclusive work experiences. The Employment Initiative is breaking down barriers at every stage of employment to transform the employment landscape through advocacy, education & training, and community engagement.

Health Equity

The Autism Society is dedicated to advancing health equity by breaking down barriers and promoting accessible healthcare. People with Autism experience higher rates of medical and mental health conditions, poor health outcomes, and premature mortality. In addition to social and economic barriers, the Autistic community faces sensory, communication, cognitive, and other unique barriers to accessible healthcare. The Autism Society is working holistically to address health equity outcomes including healthcare, mental health, suicide prevention, employment, and home and community-based services.

Vaccine Education Initiative

Historically, people with Autism and other developmental disabilities have lower immunization rates than their peers without Autism, leaving them vulnerable to vaccine-preventable diseases and comorbidities; this places them at higher risk of hospitalization, ICU admission, and even death. The Autism Society created the Vaccine Education Initiative (VEI) to address systemic barriers and promote vaccine education, confidence, and access.

The VEI is designed to improve health by ensuring children, adults, and seniors with disabilities are included and supported in healthcare settings.

As part of the Vaccine Education Initiative, we also provide healthcare professional training, advocacy, and community education, resources, outreach, and support. The Autism Society is rewriting the vaccine experience to increase accessibility, reduce trauma, and build connected, supportive, and inclusive communities.

Did you know?

- 1 in 3 adults with disabilities ages 18-44 do not have a primary care provider.
- Only 40% of physicians were very confident about their ability to provide equal quality of care to disabled patients. People with disabilities account for almost 40% of the annual visits made to emergency departments in the US each year.
- 18% of physicians strongly agreed that the healthcare system often treats disabled patients unfairly.

VEI tools, models, and resources include:

- The VEI vaccine clinic model, which has proven to increase accessibility, reduce stress, and improve outcomes with a 99% success rate.
- Our Guide to Accessible Vaccination, which provides practical recommendations for healthcare providers and family members on appointment preparation, sensory and space considerations, and injection tools.
- Our Accessible Vaccine Kit, which supports sensory, communication, and social differences. These kits help provide a more positive vaccination experience for all ages with a variety of calming and sensory tools, including noise-reducing headphones, stress balls to decrease anxiety, ShotBlocker®, a non-invasive way to lessen the pain and anxiety of needles, and more.

National Helpline Testimonials

I contacted several organizations to find resources for my niece in Philadelphia, who has a 5-year-old son on the spectrum. I was discouraged when I got no responses from the other organizations I contacted. My experience with the Autism Society was totally different. When I called the National Helpline, Lindsey responded to my call promptly. She was very pleasant, knowledgeable, supportive, professional, and efficient. She listened to my concerns patiently, identified the major issues, and provided very helpful suggestions and resources (with phone numbers). Lindsey kindly invited me to call her again if my niece or I had additional questions or concerns. After the call, she followed up with an email providing links for each of the resources she provided, and additional resources! I am extremely grateful to Lindsey for her assistance and to the Autism Society for providing such a much-needed service to the community.

– Helpline

I can’t thank you enough for this useful information that you’ve gathered for us so speedily and delivered exactly when you said you would. I’d also like to thank you for listening in our phone conversation - your understanding and support were exactly what I needed. With gratitude and best wishes.

– Helpline

Thank you so much. I was searching in the middle of the night one night to see where I could get help. All the information you provided is an absolute blessing. I’m grateful. My wife and my brother are copied on this response because caring for my child is a family affair. I can’t thank you enough.

– Helpline

Wow, this is so much amazing information. I’m truly grateful. This is the beginning of my journey as a parent and hoping through education I can better support our daughter. Thank you for sending so many links and resources!

Our Reach

- 70+ affiliates across 34 states
- 775 affiliate team members
- 397,508 people attended 9,600 events hosted nationwide
- 487,234 people served by affiliates
The Autism Society’s Affiliate of the Year award is given to an affiliate that has effectively worked together to use its resources and members to positively influence and impact the lives of self-advocates, parents, and professionals coping with Autism in their community.

In 2023, the award went to the Autism Society Northwestern Pennsylvania. They are actively involved in several initiatives and programs aimed at supporting individuals with Autism and promoting neurodiversity in the workplace.

Some of their efforts include:

- Skills to Pay the Bills: Empowering individuals with essential life and job skills like banking, cooking, and household tasks.

- Friends & Pals Teen Club Bridge to Success: The group uses the “Healthy Relationships” curriculum to support individuals with Autism in developing vital social skills like social media safety.

- Autism 101: Embracing Neurodiversity in the Workplace: This new program is a significant step toward creating inclusive workplaces. It raises awareness about Autism and promotes the understanding of neurodiversity among employers, fostering a more inclusive and supportive work environment.

- Drive to Success: Participants gain hands-on experience and training by interacting with local law enforcement, simulating real traffic stops to prepare for potential encounters on the road.

- Family Sensory & Social Outings: These events are offered monthly for families to experience structured community events in a calm sensory-friendly environment.
Affiliate Spotlight

Autism Society of Idaho

Autism Society of Idaho achieved a major milestone in 2023 when the organization successfully merged two affiliates to represent Autistic individuals and their families across the entire state of Idaho. This change brought many benefits to the Autism community in Idaho including; allowing the Autism Society to speak with one voice at the state legislature in advocating for policies and funding that support Autistic residents.

Autism Society of Maryland

The Autism Hiring Program, an initiative of the Autism Society of Maryland, advances workplace neurodiversity, connecting businesses to an untapped workforce of skilled Autistic adults, and targeting jobseekers not supported by existing systems in Maryland. Since its start in 2021, the program has placed 55 Autistic workers in meaningful jobs and built a pipeline of 25+ employers. Graduates of the program, many of them with some college or college degrees, are currently working in Cyber/IT, Retail, Administration, Recreation, Engineering, Warehouse, Manufacturing, Hospitality, Security, Manufacturing, among other professions.

Autism Society of Texas

Thanks to the Vaccine Equity Initiative, the Autism Society of Texas was able to increase health equity among people with Autism through community training events and practical support techniques across Texas. They offered free, interactive seminars in English and Spanish, to local hospitals and doctor’s offices, dental practices, as well as for parents and other support professionals in the Autism community. Training healthcare professionals to work effectively with members of the Autism community benefited both groups immensely, improving healthcare access, communication and treatment outcomes.

Receiving the 2023 Affiliate of the Year award is a great honor, motivating us to continue making a difference in the lives of those we serve. This recognition reaffirms that our work has a real impact, inspiring us to redouble our efforts in the years ahead. With humility, we accept this award, renewing our commitment to building stronger, more resilient, and thriving families and individuals in our community.

Partner Highlight: Database and Technology

As part of our current strategic plan, the Autism Society is committed to a digital transformation, ensuring that our technological systems are modernized, efficient, and effective. This includes our recent website re-launch, AutismSource™ improvements, data cleanup, and systems architecture.

IBM
IBM’s generous contribution of over $200,000 of in-kind technology services has been transformative for the Autism Society. Through their partnership, we’ve been equipped with IBM’s proprietary mapping software, a powerful tool that redesigned and enhanced our AutismSource™ platform. This software enables our constituents to effortlessly locate vital local resources, thereby streamlining access to crucial support services. IBM’s dedication to leveraging technology for social good exemplifies their commitment to making a tangible difference in the lives of Autistic individuals and their families.

Liberty Mutual
In 2023, Liberty Mutual exemplified acceptance in action by surpassing our call to action and generously donating over $600,000 in in-kind technology services to the Autism Society. Their invaluable support played a pivotal role in enhancing our organizational infrastructure.

Their efforts included facilitating the migration of our business software, optimizing our database systems for both our National Helpline and Affiliate Relations teams, and enhancing the overall user experience of our website. Liberty Mutual’s proactive engagement underscores their unwavering commitment to advancing our mission and empowering individuals in the Autism community.

Development

The Autism Society’s development department plays a vital role in securing the resources necessary to support the organization’s mission and programs. In 2023, the Autism Society’s annual Keystone Fore Autism Golf Classic, raised $207,672, surpassing over one million dollars over nine years of support.

Thanks to the incredible generosity of our foundation partners, we’re able to innovate, expand our National Programs, and better support our affiliate network.

Make Waves Family Foundation
The Make Waves Family Foundation continued its significant support of the Autism Society’s employment initiative. Make Waves supports leading programs dedicated to independent living, employment, and home and community-based services. Their ongoing work supports law enforcement training, replicable employment models, and inclusive housing.

The foundation benefactors are committed to creating meaningful job opportunities for all Autistic individuals to pursue their interests and passions; additionally, networking with corporate partners and employers to partner with the Autism Society for inclusion training and beyond, is a priority.

Thanks to a $250,000 donation plus an additional $11,000 from a match campaign, the Autism Society is poised to make a meaningful impact with their strategic employment initiative through this strategic plan and future work.

The Hussman Foundation
The Hussman Foundation continued its generous annual support with a $100,000 gift, which the Autism Society used to provide grants to affiliates across the country. 59 affiliates, approximately 85% of our network, received grants ranging between $1500 to $3000. Tens of thousands of Autistic individuals and community members participated in a wide variety of events and programming that was executed with these funds, including, advocacy efforts, social events like cooking, camps, and movie outings, to first responder and water safety trainings.

Through the generosity of The Hussman Foundation, affiliates across the country were able to greatly impact their local communities with resources, support and connection.
2023 marked the beginning of a concerted effort to forge alliances with forward-thinking corporate partners, igniting a transformative journey to amplify our resources and broaden our impact. These strategic collaborations are powerful alliances that merge the expertise, resources, and expansive reach of the corporate world with our steadfast dedication to the Autism community.

The Autism Society and Chrysler joined hands in a long-term partnership that seeks to revolutionize the driving experience for individuals with Autism and their families. Through this partnership, Chrysler introduced the Calm Cabin package, which includes calm lighting, weighted blankets and other features designed to turn every journey in a Chrysler Pacifica into a sanctuary of comfort and support. Chrysler seeks to create an inclusive experience on and off the road; together, we envision a future of thoughtful, supported vehicle designs, and Autism training for dealership employees to better serve their communities.

I have purchased vans since my son was in grade school at the same [Chrysler] dealership in Chantilly, Virginia. He is now 30. He does not drive himself and just until this past year he had his spot that he sits in in the very back to the right. The members of the team have changed over the 20 years, but have still been just as magnificent, and have gone above and beyond for us. Our van needs to look the same—black van with similar interior. They have conducted meetings in the new van we are buying so that Conner can sit in the back and get used to it. When we picked it up, in the seat of Conner’s choice was a Disney sticker book.

Driven by a profound commitment to shatter the bedwetting stigma, Goodnites is committed to supporting the Autism community by providing education, resources and communal connection. Through an ongoing partnership with the Autism Society of America, the two organizations will support the community through educational resources and community events. Designed with these families’ needs in mind, Goodnites unveiled a resource hub to provide free access to bedwetting education tailored to the Autism and ADHD communities, with contributions from the Autism Society of America. Through this partnership, we’re building a community of unwavering support, one that embraces, uplifts, and champions every individual’s journey with compassion.

iHeartMedia has demonstrated its commitment by contributing just under $200,000 worth of in-kind media advertising to the Autism Society. This significant donation underscores iHeartMedia’s dedication to using its platform to raise awareness and support initiatives that benefit communities and individuals in need. With strategic radio ads placed across national inventory, iHeartMedia offered widespread awareness and advocacy for the Autism community. Their actions speak volumes, amplifying the experiences of those in need and fostering empathy and support on a scale that matters.
Pura Vida launched two updated bracelet styles adorned with the vibrant hues of the Autism Society’s brand colors. With every purchase from our Autism Society bracelet collection, 5% of the purchase price is pledged to fuel our mission. Through creativity and thoughtful design, Pura Vida and the Autism Society demonstrate the impact of collaborative partnerships, fostering connections and empowerment within the Autistics community.

The dynamic partnership between the Autism Society and Nickelodeon continues to evolve, weaving together education, content creation, and invaluable learning resources tailored specifically for children and youth. Our collaborative efforts have yielded a variety of enriching content, from the Autism Acceptance Month guide, to our back-to-school resource pack, all thoughtfully designed to drive inclusion, and support Autistic students and their teachers on their educational journey. In addition to educational resources, we’ve jointly created short form media content for socials, Nick News, and digital activities. Our ongoing partnership is further invigorated through employee and ERG learning sessions on Autism, authentic representation, and inclusion.

Wells Fargo has emerged as a beacon of change, propelling the Autism Society’s Employment program to new heights. This partnership works to dismantle longstanding systemic barriers that have hindered the professional growth and inclusion of Autistic individuals. Through a blend of knowledge dissemination, stakeholder engagement, and coalition building, this supported our community listening sessions orchestrated by the Employment Taskforce. These sessions offer a deeper understanding of the diverse needs and aspirations within the Autism community. By actively involving Autistic individuals in the development of strategies that shape their future, this research phase helps design the future programmatic trainings for employers and employees alike.

I’m very grateful for the opportunity to be a part of the Autism Society of America – not only has it provided me with the chance to meet some wonderful people, but it has also been encouraging to learn about several initiatives (related to healthcare, employment, and Autism-related policies) that I believe have the opportunity to deeply impact the quality of life for Autistic individuals. More generally, it has been encouraging to see a slow but steady shift towards acceptance of Autistic individuals in society, and I believe this shift has been reflected in the Autism Society as well through the creation of an Autism advisory committee.
